

"We tend to laugh at the same things," says Shane (on the throne, with brother Clayton).

Most intriguing toilet humour

THE JACOBSON BROTHERS

Shane and Clayton Jacobson haven't yet seen a cent from their debut film's huge box-office takings—Clayton is driving a borrowed car because he can't afford to service his own—but the Melburnians still feel the effects of Kenny. "We get fan mail from janitors," says Shane, 36, who scored the best actor AFI for his turn as a big-hearted Portaloo plumber. Adds Clayton, 43: "And Shane got sent a drawing from a kid of a toilet pump truck!"

There won't be a Kenny sequel—"A No. 2?" asks Shane—but expect more family comedy. "Neither of us thought we'd be in this position," says Clayton, a commercials and video director who helmed the mockumentary. "It just feels like one big bloody home video to us."

Pipe dreams: pre-Kenny, Shane was a corporate entertainer.

For the full interview, go to who.com